The following table shows the results of the survey conducted in the year 1947. The data is presented in the form of a table with columns for the year and the number of respondents. The table is as follows:

| Year | Number of Respondents |
|------|-----------------------|
| 1947 | 120                   |
| 1948 | 150                   |
| 1949 | 180                   |

The above table shows that the number of respondents has increased steadily over the three-year period. This indicates that the survey is becoming more popular and that more people are willing to participate in it. The increase in the number of respondents is a positive sign for the survey and suggests that the data collected is becoming more representative of the population being studied.
